

Anagram Poem

Celestial

Somewhere in the universe someone tells how stellar stars are celestial cleats holding space fabric in place lest expansion breaks our life's lease
and no humans are left to leave tall tales.
Hold darkness at bay. Let starlight stall
so sentience has longer time slice.
Through vastness light laces
loosening space fabric to tease
all the wonder in our cells, keeping us curious at least.

Anagram Poem:

1. Invented by Terrance Hayes
2. Find a multi-syllable, long word.
My example: celestial
3. With the letters in the word, find at least eleven smaller words of at least four letters.
My smaller words: lest, least, ease, tease, teas, aces, cleats, laces, tells, tales, stall, cells, sell, slice, lease, lice, tall
4. From these words select eleven for the end words of the lines in an eleven line poem.
5. You can rhyme if you have end words that rhyme.
6. Chosen end words in bold.
