

Pompouselle

One contemplating life
on other planets
not necessarily carbon-based
or bi-lateral
in places inhospitable
to Earthly species
but in habitats
that may support
familiar life since
they are not too near or too far
from their sun
so not
too hot or too cold
to sustain life
as we know it.

Exo-planets in Goldilocks zone could have creatures but no ozone.

Pompouselle:

1. E.V. Rieu is credited with creating pompouselles with an excessively long title followed by a “dopey couplet.”
2. The couplet should have something to do with the title in often a silly way.
3. The couplet should rhyme. A feminine rhyme may be more funny.
4. The couplet should have the same number of feet. I used same syllable count.
