

Beacon of Hope

Ode to my Angel Collection

My angel collection
is muse generation
for gathering poets.
hovering around us
beside and above us
halos and wings banquet.

We call the room my blue heaven because angels animate and express their essence here. They dwell in place where creativity bodes well.

Halos are thought ringers.
Wings are inspiration bringers
Gowns flow their shining thoughts. Wingers of wise, off-key gospel singers.
Angels flock from around the world.
beacons of light, spirits unfurled.
I look at them while on the phone.
I work with them when I'm alone.
I rarely dust them, so don't ask.
I'm lax at that domestic task.
Will lead hallelujah chorus-- silent sentinels before us.

Beacon of Hope: Created by Christina R. Jussaume. Sestet stanza of 6 lines with 6 syllables per line. Then a triplet of three lines with 12 syllables per line. Next are 12 lines of 8 syllables per line. The rhyme scheme is up to each poet. It should be center aligned. It will look like a lighthouse. Spiritual in nature and uplifting.
